TARIFF PICTURES.

New York Press: A fair illustration of the way in which protection stimulates production and gives employment to workmen is shown by the increase in the American output of pig iron. In 1886 the United States only produced 6,683,329 gross tons of pig iron. In 1890 it produced 9,202,703 gross tons.

THE LAST AMERICAN MONARCH.

With the death and burial of Dom Pedro the last American monarch has passed from earth, but monarchy in America died before the death of its last representative. There has, indeed, been but one established monarchy on this continent since European discovery, and that was the Empire of Brazil. The two attempts to found an empire in Mexico both resulted in the violent death of the self-styled emperors, and it is hardly worth while to allude in this connection to the caricature, partly ludicrous and partly tragical, of royal government in Hayti.

In Brazil imperial rule lasted because it was not forced upon the people, and because, under the late Dom Pedro, it was little more than the shadow of a monarchy, the form being substantially Republican. When the Brazilians concluded that it was time for the empire, even as a shadow, to pass away, Dom Pedro showed his pure love of country by accepting the change without a struggle.

The late emperor will always be kindly remembered. He was a man of domestic virtues and of broad, statesmanlike ideas. He was not troubled with an overweening appreciation of his own importance, and never claimed to be of a different mold from other men. His amiable characteristics, his love and patronage of learning, and his hostility to slavery, which he was instrumental in abolishing in Brazil, will always be remembered to his credit.

The American people have always admired the pluck of that pioneer ocean cable builder, Cyrus W. Field, and have always pointed to his singular career as an example of how this republic rewards brains and courage.

His crazy son, Edward M. Field, whose financial insane operations have been the astonishment of the country the past week, has not only ruined himself and all who came in contact with him, but has taken every dollar his father possessed. What he did with the money has not been learned, but that it is done is no longer to be doubted.

Young Field, who has tried to commit suicide, is now under the restraints of an asylum, while his father is lying at death's door and the name of the Field family which was raised so high, is dragged in the dirt. Such is the sad epitome of the tale of woe of which one wretched imbecile can be the author.

A WISE POLICY. The following is the full text of President Harrison's message in relation to the Mormon question, and commends itself to the public as a wise and safe policy to pursue:

The legislation of Congress for repression of polygamy has, after years of resistance on the part of the Mormons, at last brought them to the conclusion that resistance is unprofitable and unavailing. This subject has been considered by the Senate and the House, and the bill for the repression of polygamy, which has been passed by the Senate, and is now in the House, is a measure of wisdom and justice. It is a measure which will bring about the permanent settlement of the Mormon question, and will bring about the permanent settlement of the Mormon question, and will bring about the permanent settlement of the Mormon question.

AN INTERESTING historical relic has been brought into prominence by changing hands. It is the handcuffs which Sir William Wallace wore when conveyed to London for execution. Attached thereto is this legend: "Part of the fetters in which Sir William Wallace was sent to London, July 9, 1305. Sent as an insult by Edward to Sir William's aunt, Miss Jane Wallace, who lived at Benaly, and, dying, caused it to be buried on a hill-top where it was dug up July 9, 1835, exactly 530 years after."

Mr. ARCHIBALD FORBES, the great war correspondent, holds himself at the command of his editor-in-chief at all hours. He has two entire equipments, one for cold countries, the other for the torrid zone. Firearms, clothing, saddles, are all ready, even to a purse full of gold, and passports for every country on the globe. An order by telephone, and instantly he departs for Zanzibar or Moscow.

RECENT STATISTICS show that France has 522 learned societies, of which 135 have been officially recognized as of National importance. Of the total number, 95 are historical and social, 95 agricultural and horticultural, 57 medical and pharmaceutical, 45 scientific, 41 artistic, 37 geographical, and the rest miscellaneous, including photographic, statistical and ballooning associations.

At SAN JACINTO, Cal., the other day a boy named Bennie Smith was playing about his father's wagon, when he fell from a wheel to the ground. A stump of weed, about three inches high, stuck up from the ground and penetrated the little fellow's jugular vein. The boy would have bled to death had not help been close at hand.

COUNT Tolstoy had better be careful or he will find himself on the way to Siberia. He has begun to talk about leading a revolution if the government does not hurry up the food supply.

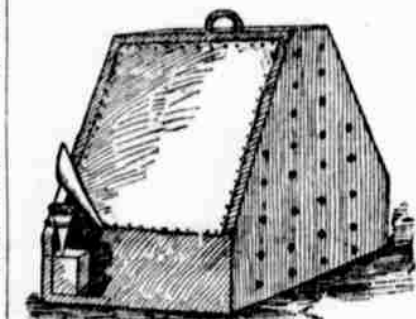

There is a practice in vogue in Massachusetts of pardoning from state prison two of the oldest criminals on each Thanksgiving day.

MINERS AND MINING. The Keno, Nev., Gazette quotes John W. Mackay as saying that there is low-grade ore enough in the Con. Virginia to keep 200 stamps running for twenty years. Enough gold has been taken out of one claim at Harqua Hala to pay for the purchase and cost of the mill, and this has been done in the short space of four months.

Yuma Sentinel: Out of $20,000 worth of ore shipped to San Francisco from Yuma only a small proportion of the value is returned to our miners. If the ore was smelted here the result would be different, and a much larger profit would be made by miners. Build a smelter; it will pay big interest.

The Yuma Times says: It is reported that the Monitor placer property at Gila City is to be worked under new management of which L. C. Moreland is the representative. The property has been the victim of ignorance and mismanagement from the start, not a man connected with it knowing anything about placer mining. George Kelley has been in Los Angeles, and is said to have been successful in getting some practical men to take hold of the property.

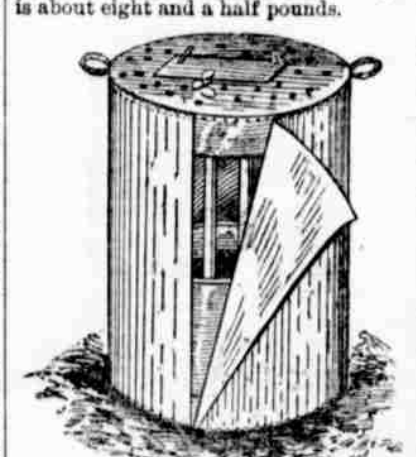

SHIPPING COOPS. Two Designs for Neat, Light Coops in Which to Ship Poultry. A careless manner of shipping poultry will materially curtail the profits of any poultryman. The value of the stock is likely to be depreciated by it, and clumsy, cumbersome coops will unnecessarily increase express charges. Farmers as well as breeders of fine stock are always interested in designs for light shipping crates, and we therefore reproduce from a number of these described and illustrated by The Southern Fancier the following: "The shipping coop made in accordance with the plan shown at Fig. 1 has the end of the coop of solid wood 1-inch material and is bored full of holes for ventilation. The front and back of coop has a 7-inch board at the bottom, also bored full of holes for ventilation. The sides are sloping to correspond with ends. Burels or calico is then tacked on running from the top of the 7-inch board to the top. The top board is 13 inches wide and 23 inches long, the coop when finished being 22 inches square and 23 inches high at ends. A can is nailed in the corner for water. A small funnel runs into the water can. Over this funnel is pasted the following notice: "Please pour water in this funnel for the fowls." An opening is cut in the top board as long and wide as it will allow for ventilation. A small feed trough can be tacked on inside, but I do not use one, as fowls eat very little in transit.

A COMMODIOUS SHIPPING COOP.

"For very long distances the feed trough might be an advantage, with a large mouthed funnel through which to pour the feed. This coop is strong, has plenty of ventilation, and the fowls are sure of water if they extended to in transit. Besides, it is very light, 4-inch stuff being heavy enough for bottom and all. The coop being described will hold four fowls, large size."

In the second cut is illustrated a cheese box coop. It is the invention of a correspondent of The Poultry World, who wrote as follows concerning it: "The cheese box coop has met with such universal favor that I wish others to have the benefit of this simple, light and altogether desirable arrangement. Plenty of empty cheese boxes can be found at our retail grocery stores, at from five to eight cents each, also coarse sackings that will cut so as to cover four boxes for ten cents. Two strong laths cut into four 18-inch lengths, a few nails, one fourth paper 4-ounce tacks, and fifteen minutes' time with a hammer and clinching iron and the thing is before you. The weight is about eight and a half pounds.

A CHEESE BOX COOP.

"In it the chicks are not easily frightened and it does not injure their combs or break their feathers. I sent a pair of White Leghorns to a slow in Pennsylvania in one of these boxes, and the officers were so well pleased with the idea that they had it placed on exhibition. The chicks, after being awarded first premium and silver cup, were returned to me without a feather being soiled or ruffled. In warm weather I use six posts, placing two on opposite sides, one and a half inches apart, inside of which are fastened cups for food and water. In cold weather I put the food in the bottom of the box, and water is not necessary."

Ground Plan of a Convenient and Comfortable Sheep Barn. The illustration shows the ground plan of a sheep barn. Above the ground floor, of course, mows and bins for grain can be placed. A cupola on top, over a hole in the roof, should be added for ventilation. Shutters opening and closing by means of cord can be fixed in the sides of the cupola. A correspondent of the Dakota Farmer uses a barn similar to that in the picture and finds it very satisfactory. The large doors at the ends of the barn are for a wagon to drive through when the place is cleaned or when hay and grain are hauled in.

German Syrup. "I have been ill for about five years," "I have had the best medical advice," "I took the first dose in a few hours sleep. There was no further hemorrhage till next day, when I had a slight attack, which stopped almost immediately. By the third day all trace of blood had disappeared and I had recovered much strength. The fourth day I sat up in bed and ate my dinner, the first solid food for two months. Since that time I have gradually gotten better and am now able to move about the house. My death was daily expected, and a great surprise to my friends and the doctor. There can be no doubt about the effect of German Syrup, as I had an attack just previous to its use. The only relief was after the first dose." J. R. LOGGHEAD, Adelaide, Australia.
